Since the question was raised by the Huzur Secy and orders have been obtained from His Highness by the Huzur Secy himself, perhaps a reply to him is unnecessary. If approved the file will be recorded.

My dear Mr. Kesavaiengar,

It is announced in papers that till the war lasts no salutes need be fired on arrival of distinguished persons who are entitled to the same.

It is usual to fire salutes when the Hon'ble the Resident and Rulers entitled to them come to Mysore as invited guests for the Birthday. I shall be obliged if you will kindly let me know what may be done.

Yours Sincerely

H' Hmmbrechelly

Kind reference is invited to Flags P & Q (copies of which were sent to the Hyderabad Residency) where the Residency have intimated that no salutes should be fired during the War for H E the Viceroy or Civil & Military Authorities. As such salute does not seem to be necessary in the case of the Honble the Resident. It is presumed that Rulers will not wish salutes to be fired in British India during the War. There is no mention regarding Salute during the visit of a Ruler to another State. Since there is no Salute for H E the Viceroy when he visits a State, it is a point for consideration and orders whether Salute should be fired when Ruling Princes come to Mysore during War. Submitted for perusal and orders.

RF 23/5

In the case of the British Resident no Salutes need be fired as it has been definitely ruled that there should be no such Salutes in Indian States for "British Indian officials" during the war.

As regards Rulers of Indian States the usual practice may be suspended on the presumption that they have given up their salutes for the time being, as they have done in British India.
